It'll do, until I can get a phantoscope.

Oh, wait! I don't need a phantoscope!

Score!

I think she means the device from Neal Stephenson's Diamond Age, glasses that provide the wearer with a computer-generated image which overlays or replaces normal vision. Basically, VR goggles that are actually really good. Used both for entertainment and work purposes, like, say, so you can see the molecules you're manipulating into nanomachines. Also known as phenomenoscopes. I'd love a set myself.

The colored contacts stay.

Have I worn the Doom Kitty ones to work yet?

Okay, on reflection and in hindsight and all that stuff, it probably would have been better to give Dad more than 24 hours to recover from April Fool's before he saw those.

But they are aaaaaaawesome.
